How Were Similarly Appearing Species Eliminated? I have seen many Cassin's Finches at my feeder. This bird was noticeably more distinct in its markings than any Cassin's. The head had clear white lines alternating dark chocolate brown. Cassin's have creamy white or buff alternating with dark (but not chocolate) brown. Also the bill was very short as in a purple finch. Museum collection here at C.U. was consulted for positive I.D.
